+ A pocketful of dreams

Staff Reporter

BANGALORE: "If someone has actually transformed 'pocketful of dreams' into a 'pocketful of achievements', it is Steve Chalke," said Shantanu Dutta, executive director of Oasis India, on Tuesday during the premiere of the short film, Pocketful of Dreams, at St. Joseph's High School here.

Mr. Chalke is a British author and founder of Oasis and Stop the Traffik, an anti-human trafficking initiative.

His film has elements of a documentary, a reality show and drama. It is about Ranjith, a boy from a slum community in Bangalore who dreams of being a software engineer. Ranjith, who plays himself in the movie, is a student of Seeds Educational project run by Oasis India with The Justice Revolution. The son of a balloon seller, Ranjith, smiling shyly, said: "I really want to be a software engineer when I grow up, and take care of my family."
